

Cardiac Paraganglioma: An Incidental Finding During Workup for Angina

Aaron Zuckerman¹, Arman Qamar², Mikhail Vaynblat¹, Michael Koeckert¹, Fang Zhou³, and Anvar Babaev²

¹New York University Department of Surgery

²New York University Leon H Charney Division of Cardiology

³New York University Department of Pathology

April 4, 2022

Abstract

Cardiac paragangliomas are extremely rare cardiac masses. Our patient presented with angina secondary to coronary atherosclerosis and was incidentally found to have a large cardiac mass on coronary angiography. He underwent a full imaging workup and ultimately excision of the mass. Final pathology demonstrated paraganglioma. This case illustrates the presentation, workup, and definitive treatment of this rare tumor.

Hosted file

Paraganglioma case report.doc available at <https://authorea.com/users/473703/articles/563827-cardiac-paraganglioma-an-incidentalfinding-during-workup-for-angina>

